Why did the United States invade the Philippines?

McKinley quotation

There is wide agreement that McKinley never actually said this; but the comment reflects much about American sentiment of the era. Quoted in

Schirmer, Daniel B. and Stephen Shalom, The Philippines Reader (Boston: South End Press, 1983) pp. 22-23

Desire for an overseas empire:

Many quotations for and against the war:

Schirmer, Daniel B., Republic or Empire: American Resistance to the Philippine War (Rochester, VT: Schenkman Books, 1972)

Good explanation of the historic context of desire for an American empire:

Williams, William Appleman, The Roots of the Modern American Empire (New York: Vintage Books, 1970)

New markets for American goods:

Senator Albert Beveridge observed: "American factories are making more than the American people can use; American soil is producing more than they can consume. Fate has written our policy for us The Philippines give us a base at the door of all the East The power that rules the Pacific . . . is the power that rules the worldThe mission of our race [is to control] the trade of the world....and the Philippines logically are our first target." Quoted in:

Zinn, Howard, A People's History of the United States (New York: Harper Celephon , 1980) pp. 292

Source of raw materials for America's factories

Williams, William Appleman, The Roots of the Modern American Empire (New York: Vintage Books, 1970)

Strategic location for a naval base

Judge P.S. Grosscup in The Chicago Tribune, May 3, 1898:

"The Latin race...is a diminishing race; the Anglo-Saxon, pre-eminent in all the arts and ambitions that make this age powerful, is an increasing race. It is the only race that has, since the beginning of time, correctly conceived the individual rights of men, and is, on that account,...surviving, by fitness, the other races..."

"The twentieth century will...undoubtedly cleanse and advance the stagnant peoples [of Asia]....Into this field the moral purposes and commercial courage of the Anglo-Saxon are bound to project themselves....This war has shown that we need a home port in Asiatic waters. The strategy of war has compelled us to obtain a temporary foothold in the Philippines. I believe we will find a way to make it permanent."

Military launching-pad

In 1900 the US sent 2,500 soldiers from its army in the Philippines to suppress the Boxer rebellion in China; the first use of the Philippines as a "launching pad" for military intervention elsewhere:

President Quezon wavers

Quezon moves to demonstrate Philippine neutrality:

- * He requested Philippine independence in 1940, six years ahead of schedule.
- * He limited MacArthur's control of the armed forces and even MacArthur's access to his own (Quezon's) office.
- * He cut the military budget, closed training camps and reduced arms purchases.
- * He reportedly told a crowd that the Philippines “could not be defended even if every last Filipino were armed with modern weapons.”:

1941 The US and Philippines Prepare for War

Roosevelt

In July 1941, U.S. President Franklin Roosevelt ordered the following:

- Banning of sales of American commodities, especially oil, to Japan, and freezing of all Japanese assets within the USA;
- Creation of the U.S. Army Forces in the Far East (USAFEF) command;
- Absorption of the Philippine Army into the new command;
